

Dear Reader,

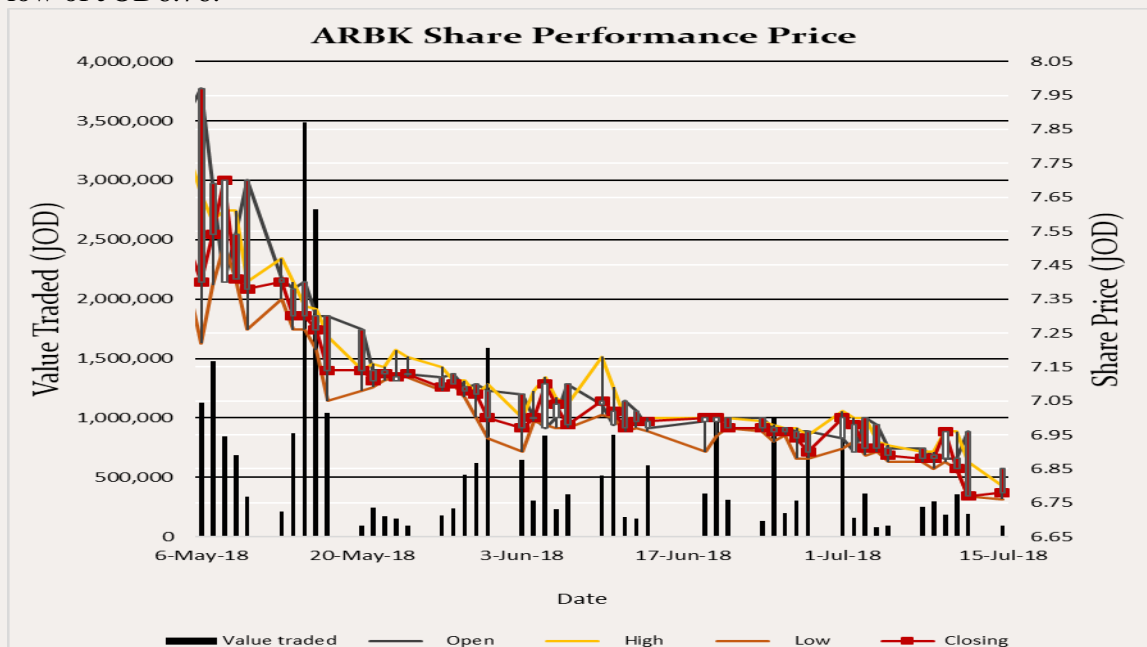

The market has been on the downturn for the past few months. Last week this trend persisted. The 52-week range for the general index is 2,034 - 2,281. This past Thursday, the index closed at nearly 2,038 points, a 0.96% drop from the previous week. If the index continues to decline, it could reach record lows.

The financial index went down by 1.1% and closed at 2,784 points from 2,815 points the week before that. The banks index went from 4,274 down to 4,226 points.

Last week, out of all publicly traded companies on ASE, the shares of 136 companies were traded, of which only 33 companies witnessed an increase in their share price over the week while the majority witnessed a decrease.

From the 8th of July until the 12th, ARBK was traded each and every trading day. The minimum and maximum number of shares traded from Sunday to Thursday was 27,252 and 51,228 shares, respectively. This comes in contrast to past weeks when the number of shares traded was much higher.

ARBK has not made any new public disclosures to ASE. Technical indicators remain positive about the stock's future outlook. The stock's decline can be attributed to the situation in the financial market to a major extent. Once the market rebounds, it could pull ARBK along. Yesterday ARBK closed at JOD6.79 with a high of JOD6.80 and a low of JOD6.76.
